$3.00 to $3.98
Values at $1.98

Owing to the continued popularity of "White" and the consequent demand for China Silk Waists, both day and evening wear, it is seldom that one has the chance to secure them, under the established prices.

This opportunity comes by reason of a Clean-up of certain lines, whose quantities have become reduced to one and two waists of a style. Lot includes various pretty styles, in strictly tailored, as well as dainty lace trimmed waists, in high and low necks, long or short sleeves, White Silk Waists, that sold up to $3.98 each, from which you may choose at $1.98

LABOR CROWD SEES CUPID'S KNOT TIED

Raymond Wills and Miss Lizzie Flinn Married as Holiday Attraction.

GREAT DAY OF CELEBRATING

Thousands Visit Fair Grounds, Where Varied Program of Amusements Is Offered.

Cupid never chose a more bizarre theatre for his machinations than he did yesterday afternoon when he selected a raised dais in front of the grandstand at the Fair Grounds upon which to unite in marriage Raymond M. Wills and Miss Lizzie B. Flinn, both of Swanboro. The ceremony was sandwiched in between a horse race and a baby show, and fully 8,000 people craned their necks from the grandstand and other points of vantage to witness the tying of the knot. It was by all odds the biggest drawing card of the giant Labor Day celebration, and supplied the touch of human interest which made the whole crowd akin.

The bridal party drove up to the platform promptly at 3:45, and a respectful silence pervaded the audience while the principals took their places facing the grandstand. The bride, an exceedingly pretty young woman, wore a neat dress of white Eclair with veil, and carried Bride roses. She was attended by Miss Lillian White, sister of the groom, wearing white net, with pink points, embroidered and carrying pink carnations. The best man was John Kennedy, of South Richmond.

For fully fifteen minutes the wedding party remained in the sight of thousands. Not a word was said, and the only sound was the rustle of the bride's train. Rev. J. M. Rowland, of the West End Methodist Church, read the ritual and spoke the words that made the pair man and wife. But when the young man extracted the wedding ring from his little finger and stuck the band of his bride to place it on her finger, the crowd could restrain itself no longer, and cheer after cheer rent the air. The young woman blushed to the roots of her hair at the noisy demonstration. But here the ordeal was over, and a defiant look which made her at once a popular favorite. The couple posed for a moment as a concession to a group of kodak fans, and then disappeared into the welcome oblivion of their carriage.

Babies—All Styles.
The baby show, as anticipated, was one of the big features of the day. Fifty infants, ranging in age from six months to two years, were entering by fond mammy in the hope of capturing one of the five prizes. Youngsters of the male sex predominated and captured four of the five prizes. They were present in all stages of undress and snuggly, and included the whole repertoire, from the individual just emerging from the paregoric stage to the young man and young woman able to babble in monosyllables. The judges, Major D. C. Richardson, Justice John Crutchfield and Delegate D. L. Toney, eyed the rival babies critically, and in accordance with a code of infant development developed through long and assiduous lives, picked five of the likeliest for the winners.

John Joseph Ennis, the eight-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ennis, of 301 Everett Street, South Richmond, won a $100 prize. The prize of class A, limited to infants between the ages of six months and one year. The second prize, a high chair, went to George Smith, five months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Smith, of 1813 West Cary Street. The third prize, a baby carriage, was won by a baby named "Peanut," thirteen months old, to two years old—were Gustav Kahn Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Reynolds, of 405 West Fifteenth Street, South Richmond, high chair, Raymond Franklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Franklin, of 302 South Linden Street, shoes, and Eula Glenn, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Glenn, of 301 West Taylor Street, shoes.

Crowds Were Immense.
Gate receipts at the Fair Grounds yesterday indicate that fully 12,000 persons paid admissions to the big labor festival. It was the largest and best behaved crowd in years, and netted for the Labor Temple fund close to $1,500. A miniature Midway, with an old plantation show and other catch-penny attractions, supplied the

COUNTIES SPLIT ON EASTERN SHORE

Accomac and Northampton Agree to Seek a Political Divorce.

Although due announcement was made recently that a reconciliation had been effected between the counties of Accomac and Northampton, and that the suit for divorce of the legislative district would be withdrawn and all forgiven, it now appears that negotiations have been broken off and that a final decree will be asked of the voters at the polls.

Further, it would seem that the judgment will be in favor of Accomac, for that county has a majority of the jury on its side. That is, it has the most voters. The only question is as to what extent the appeal made by their own county matter will affect them when they go to the polls.

Divided Members.
For many years there has been an unwritten law on the Eastern Shore covering division of representation. Accomac has one member of the House. Another is elected as a floater from Accomac and Northampton. This floater has always been given by mutual agreement to Northampton. By virtue of the preponderance of population in Accomac, that county has by consent given the State Senator, which the Eastern Shore shares with Princess Anne. What the latter thought it did not matter, for the rest could control, and Princess Anne has a member of the House anyway.

Nobody seems to know just how this year's row started. William Bullitt, though the incumbent floater, wanted to come back, and announced his candidacy. A candidate for the federal position arose in Accomac in the person of Barton K. Lilliston. Also there are two candidates for the Senate from Accomac, and one from Princess Anne.

Division Is Real.
Mr. Fitzhugh submitted his claims to the people of his own county and defeated a local opponent. He is remembered that Accomac can so far outvote Northampton that the former can elect anybody it wishes. The committee got into a wrangle, and the threat was made that if Accomac did not withdraw, the Northampton people would support the Princess Anne man for Senator, which might elect him in view of the fact that Accomac has two votes for the Senate. The daily quarrel reached the stage of open rupture, and while Mr. Fitzhugh was on the way to the Accomac ticket in the primary, that of Mr. Lilliston will appear there also. And some of the Northampton people want their county to vote for the Princess Anne candidate for Senator in retaliation. The result will be known by Friday morning. At least a limited divorce seems probable.

In the meantime there are four candidates for direct representative from the Eastern Shore. They are: J. Harry Raw, former Judge; J. W. G. Blackstone, L. D. Teackie Quinby and Sewell A. Taylor.

WATCHERS MAY BE NAMED LOCALLY

Chairman Ellyson Rules Candidates Need Not Appear in Person.

Recognized friends of candidates for the United States Senate may designate voters to represent their principals at the polls in Thursday's primary, according to a ruling made yesterday by State Chairman J. Taylor Ellyson. The chairman construes the primary law to the effect that it will not be necessary to have the candidates themselves designate the watchers at all precincts in the State. The correspondence on the subject was had between C. B. Garnett, general manager of the Virginia Democratic League, and Mr. Ellyson, and is given out by Mr. Garnett with Mr. Ellyson's approval. It is as follows:

September 4, 1911.
Hon. J. Taylor Ellyson.

Chairman State Democratic Committee, Richmond, Va.:
Dear Sir,—Information has come to me that it will be claimed by some judges of election that no one can be recognized as a watcher in the polls under the primary plan, unless such person be designated and selected by either Mr. Jones or Mr. Glass. You will readily see how unfair such a ruling would be. You must recognize that such designation is practically impossible. All that can be required is that each watcher shall be a responsible man, selected by those who are recognized as friends of Mr. Glass or Mr. Jones. There can be no practical difficulty about such a course, as there will be no trouble at each poll in knowing who are their friends in that neighborhood.

I ask that you will kindly write me your decision as to this matter. You will recognize that I am justified in asking that you write me as an immediate answer as possible, since there are only a few days before the primary, and therefore, if you will send me an answer at once, I am, Very truly,
(Signed) C. B. GARNETT,
General Manager.

September 4, 1911.
Mr. C. B. Garnett,
General Manager,
Richmond, Va.:

Dear Sir,—In reply to your inquiry of this date I beg to say that under the primary plan the recognized friends of either Mr. Jones or Mr. Glass would have the right to select a responsible man to represent them in the precinct, under that provision of the primary plan that declares that "Candidates for office shall have the privilege of having one friend each within the room where the election is being conducted, to remain until after the completion of the count of the vote and certification of the result. I therefore respectfully request that, wherever any candidate desires to exercise the above privilege he or his friends must be permitted to do so. Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. TAYLOR ELLYSON,
Chairman State Committee.

TAX CONFERENCE WILL MEET TO-DAY

Delegates From Many States Already Are on Ground.

Governor Dix will not be present at the International Tax Conference which meets here to-day in opening session, and will not personally deliver the address on "State Comity and Taxation," scheduled for this afternoon. A telegram yesterday to Secretary A. C. Pleydell, of the association, states that the Governor's presence will be required at the opening of the New York State Legislature at Washington, a circumstance which will make it impossible for him to come to Richmond as he had hoped. His address will be read by Lawson Purdy, president of the New York Tax Department.

Resentment is expressed on all sides that Governor Dix cannot be here, inasmuch as the whole body of delegates had looked forward with interest to his coming. While his address will not suffer at the hands of the tax men, an element of disappointment that the Governor was not here to deliver it in person will hardly be wanting.

Governors Coming.
Leaving out the unfortunate instance of Governor Dix, the conference will lack representation by State Executives. Invitations have been issued to every Governor in the country, and a number of these have written that they will be here. First of these to arrive is Governor Lee of Oklahoma, who reached the city yesterday. Others who are expected this morning are Governor E. F. Noel, of Mississippi; J. K. Tenner, of Pennsylvania; Cole L. Blease, of South Carolina; and W. E. Glascock, of West Virginia.

Among the Governors who have written that they will make every effort to attend the conference and likely will be here are A. W. Gilchrist, of Florida; Austin L. Crothers, of Maryland; James H. Hawley, of Idaho; Chester H. Aldrich, of Nebraska; Tasker L. Odd, of Nevada; R. P. Bass, of New Hampshire, and Judson Harmon, of Ohio.

Forty States Represented.
The scope of the conference may be inferred from the fact that averages for the previous four meetings of the association showed that forty States had delegates present. The roster given at tax headquarters last night indicated that the representation will be quite as cosmopolitan this year, delegates having already arrived from such far-off States as Oregon, and Idaho, in addition to the States of the Union. Twenty-five colleges and universities, and five Canadian provinces, are represented at the annual conference.

From a liberal registration at the association headquarters at the Jefferson Hotel last night, are taken these numbers: from 100 to 1,000 delegates, 100; from 1,000 to 2,000, 100; from 2,000 to 3,000, 100; from 3,000 to 4,000, 100; from 4,000 to 5,000, 100; from 5,000 to 6,000, 100; from 6,000 to 7,000, 100; from 7,000 to 8,000, 100; from 8,000 to 9,000, 100; from 9,000 to 10,000, 100.

First Meeting Last Night.
First of the meetings of the conference took place last night, when the executive committee of the association convened in annual session for the consideration of plans bearing on the work of the body for the coming year. The conference will be formally opened this afternoon at 2:30 by President Foote, after which Mayor Bland will deliver the welcome address. Responses on behalf of the visitors will follow. The first session will close with the reading of Governor Dix's paper and with an address by A. C. Pleydell, on "Tax Legislation for the Year."

Exhibits From Thirty-Eight States.
In the headquarters of the Tax Association are displayed exhibits from thirty-eight States and several Canadian provinces. These are chiefly tables and diagrams illustrating the tax laws of the different States, and the kinds of reports required by them from corporations and individuals. The States, indeed, have made it a point to be well represented at the conference of the association, and have invariably sent to it their highest tax experts.

In this connection it is worth noting that the delegates to the annual conference of the association are not necessarily members of that body. Delegates are designated by the several States and universities, who may or may not be members of the association. Membership is offered these delegates, but they are permitted the choice of affiliating themselves with the organizations or remaining out of it. The conference is called and organized by the International Tax Association, which is a body of tax experts, and is attended by delegates outside of the body in as large numbers as by those within.

The Social Side.
Governor and Mrs. Mann will receive the delegates, their wives, and specially invited guests, at the Executive Mansion this evening from 8 to 11. Cards are being issued to all accredited delegates admitting them free of charge to the Confederate Museum, Polk Miller and his negro quartette will give a concert of Southern melodies in honor of the visiting delegates in the balcony of the Jefferson Hotel Wednesday after the conclusion of the opening session. Other features for the entertainment of the visitors will be announced later.

Seek Walpole Brothers.
The police of Richmond have been asked by the department of Detroit, Mich., to aid in locating John and Patrick Walpole, brothers of the late Police Lieutenant Henry Walpole, of the Michigan city, who are heirs to his estate. Both men work for railroad.

SPECIAL PRIZE WON BY ORDAWAY PERKINS

Close Fight for Watch Last Week, and Winner Had Small Margin—Last Bonus Vote Offer on This Week—Every One Busy.

The competition for the watch, which was offered as a special prize to the contestant turning in the most money on subscriptions last week, was a close one, and a few dollars' worth of subscriptions secured by either of several contestants would have changed the result.

Master Orday Perkins, of district No. 1, is the winner of the watch, and can have same by calling at The Times-Dispatch office. Miss Dorsey Hopkins, of Lexington, Va., was a close second, and Master Hendrick A. Bracey, of Joyceville, Va., third. As stated in previous announcements the amount of money turned in by each will not be made public until after the contest closes. At that time any contestant wanting the information can get it by examining the records at this office.

This week will, from all indications, be the busiest time the contest has so far seen. With the end of the race so near, and with another special bonus vote offer on, contestants will expect every effort, and there will be some big chances in the line of standings.

No more coupons will appear in the Times-Dispatch after next Sunday, and all coupons must be in this office before September 12. Postively no coupons will be counted after that date, and any not in by that time will be destroyed. From then on it will be entirely a subscription battle.

The special bonus vote offer allowing 10,000 extra votes on every $25 worth of subscriptions turned in this week closes Saturday night, and as this is the last special offer of any kind that will be made during the contest, contestants should make every possible subscription. Those who have been holding their efforts should go after it this week harder than ever, as only the regular schedule of votes will be allowed after this.

The list of standings will be published again on Thursday, and will include all votes deposited in the ballot box before 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

ERRORS BY BATTERY LOSE FOR RICHMOND

Joe Boehling Pitches Great Ball, but His Errors Help Bankers to Win—Rawlings an Enigma. Maryland Athletic Club Gets Best of Money Counters in First Game.

When three counts had gone into the hands of the locals, and literally pitched, his battery forgot the first and fourth frames, Richmond was a winner.

Six errors are enough to lose any ball game, but Joe Boehling was up against another proposition. Only three singles were found in "Shag" Rawlings' assortment, and this largely tells the tale of the defeat of the locals from Dixie, who himself landed for one of the safeties, while Joe Whitehead and R. Rawlings got one of the dust left aside from the errors. It was a pitchers' battle pure and simple, with Shag having nothing on Boehling. Frank Rawlings, the pitcher's brother, seemed unable to handle the ball, and the center, and this, too, helped the home lads. After Blount was hit from third, the pitcher had a different story was told, and a few of the Bankers reached first.

The championship is by no means decided. The cleavage of the opinion that the Cleavers are of the opinion they have been named, will figure in the final count-up comes. A number of Washingtonians will make the journey to Richmond next Saturday, when the second double-header will be played in the capital of the Old Dominion. Both the Bankers and M. A.
